Rosh HaShanah Recipes - Have a Sweet New Year!

by @TheKosherChef

Soft & Chewy Honey Cookies

Ingredients: 6 cups flour
2 tsp baking powder
2 tsp baking soda
Pinch of salt
6 eggs
1 cup oil
2 cups sugar
6 heaping Tbs honey

Recipe: Mix together all the ingredients together. Roll into balls and place on lined cookie sheets. Bake at 375°F/190°C for 9 minutes. Press chocolate chips, raisins or raisins into center while still warm. (Makes about 120 cookies.)

Apple & Cinnamon Tart

Ingredients: One sheet of puff pastry dough
1/2 teaspoon of cinnamon
3 med Granny Smith apples
2 tablespoons of unsalted butter melted
2 tablespoons of pure maple syrup

Recipe: Preheat oven 400. Mix sugar and cinnamon, set aside. Melt butter, set aside. Cut puff pastry into 6 inch rectangles. Core and cut apples, half moon shape thin. Place on dough and sprinkle sugar mixture. Drizzle butter on top and bake till puff pastry is golden brown. When out of oven drizzle with maple syrup. Enjoy!

How Sharon Met Hila by Leah Hakimian

Dr. Leah Hakimian currently researches the question: How do Jewish couples meet and marry? In the 90's she founded two nonprofit Jewish matchmaking programs, and continues to champion the role of community in helping singles meet. She writes on a volunteer basis to inspire her readers and to encourage them to keep their "antennae up." She resides in Jerusalem and Great Neck, New York. HaChodesh now has the privilege of sharing her stories with you.

Hila never thought she would marry a short guy. Sharon never thought he would marry a tall girl. Never say never.

Sharon Daniel loved his medical school studies at Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, but he had other interests as well. In the fall of 2008, he enrolled in a pottery class. "For three hours a week, I was in another world," says Sharon.

When you check out the lists of "Best Places to Meet Single Guys," one recommendation often appears: If you have a specific hobby, pursue your interest in a class. You will further your knowledge and may meet a new man in the process.

But that wasn't why Hila Patchi studied pottery for four years. Hila liked art and needed the relaxation of something totally different from her full-time job of working with children at-risk. Anyway, what are the chances of meeting a guy in a Beersheba pottery class who is religiously observant, educated, older than Hila and the right height?

In fact, aside from Sharon, no other guys were taking the course. He was surrounded by 17 women.

But only one caught his eye - Hila, and they soon became friends. The first person to see that the relationship could go beyond friendship was Hila's sister, Yael, a mother of five, who came along to take a pottery class. She gave Sharon the "thumbs up" and encouraged her sister to move ahead to the dating stage.

Hila coolly considered his pluses. Sharon was a good friend, and he was both educated and religiously observant. Yet two things made her uncomfortable. When they met, Hila was 28, and Sharon was two years younger. "Not significant," concluded Hila. Her two sisters had married younger guys.

But there was the glaring second problem. She was 5'11 and Sharon was 5'5." Now, that seemed insurmountable.

Then, in the summer of 2009, Hila took a spiritual trip to the city of Uman in Ukraine to visit the grave of Rabbi Nachman of Bratslav, as many Jews do to seek the intercession of the tzadik (righteous man).

Hila Patchi carried a list of friends to pray for, and Sharon's name was on the list.

"From the time I left Uman, I could not get Sharon out of my head," says Hila. She returned to Beersheba and took a proactive step - she sent him a short text message, suggesting that maybe they should go out. "Just what I was thinking" was Sharon's reaction.

Besides pottery, they shared other interests. They loved the same kind of music, and they both played the guitar and flute. And they both loved to travel and were trekkers. One of their favorite hiking spots was along a spring in the Golan Heights, where Sharon proposed to Hila in December 2009. Nobody thought any more about the issue of a few inches difference in height.

Sharon and Hila were married on February 7, 2010. Mazal tov!
